ARTIST STATEMENT

My artwork has always revolved around the female figure as a central point to the divine feminine, the embodiment of the sacred. In 2003, I received my first grant from the Kentucky Foundation for Women to produce a series of photographic altars based on the sacred feminine. In 2005, I received my second grant from the foundation to produce a body of digital photomontages based on family archetypes and genetic coding about my most notorious relative, General Pancho Villa of Mexico.

However, my artwork began a shift the moment that Cancer entered into the relationship between my partner and myself. His diagnosis and subsequent death changed not only my life but also my art. During his nine month battle with the disease, I was drawn to color and a heightened state of beauty. My work contained everything my life at this time did not. I began creating Madonna and saint figures that resonated calmness and an ethereal quality that provided me with a sense of peace outside my routine of impersonal doctors and sterile hospitals. Using vintage photographs containing scuffmarks and scratches as most of the centerpieces for my compositions, I had the factor of decay already present. These marks represent the one dark element within this series. Building upon them further through added, digital manipulation, I am providing a visual expression of the deterioration associated with age, disease and ultimately, of course, death. This work is my way of surviving the abandonment created by death through the act of creation as a means of self-expression and self-preservation.

TEACHING PHILOSOPHY

As a teacher I set up an atmosphere aimed at breaking down boundaries through investigation and experimentation. By providing a broad and diverse vocabulary I am able to help students locate their own unique voices through their own sense of natural curiosity. I have always pushed students to test the boundaries of what they consider art to be, whether through the act of creation, presentation, or by interpolating one media into another. Perhaps this is because I have always pushed myself to go exploring outside my own comfort zone. Only through trial and error can true knowledge and skill be gained.

The Digital art world is an extremely technically oriented field. I therefore expect my students to become fluent in the basic understanding and principles of the media. This means they must be diligent to the constantly changing and fluctuating digital technologies along with an understanding of art history as well as the pedagogy of contemporary art theory. These factors are important for my students to gain a foundation on which to build their creative voices upon. This knowledge gives them the verbal understanding on why they create and the language they will need to define and defend their work within the framework of contemporary society.
